

Bishop Bonner's Cottage Museum

This delightful cottage dating from the 15th century is the oldest domestic building in the market town of Dereham. It houses displays of local history and the archaeology of the surrounding area in the Breckland region of central Norfolk.

The Museum, situated in St Withburga Lane, Dereham, next to the parish church, is open from May to the end of September. For current details visit www.derehamhistory.com.

Due to the age and Grade II status of the building, wheelchair access is restricted to two/three ground floor rooms only.

For further information regarding the Museum's displays and history, please phone Sue Walker on 07526 909714 or email suegww@icloud.com.

History of the Cottage

Virtually untouched by the 21st century, this beautiful timber-framed, thatched building is particularly noted for its unusual coloured pargetting. The oldest surviving domestic building in Dereham, it was originally three cottages built at different times: the earliest dates to between 1500 and 1620, the second to the mid or late 1600s and the last later still.

It is the only thatched building in Dereham to have survived the fires of 1581 and 1679. With its sloping ceilings, tiny rooms, twisting staircases and wooden beams, it is easy to imagine how the many previous inhabitants lived here in the past.

The Cottage itself has a colourful history. It takes its name from Bishop Bonner, Rector of the neighbouring St Nicholas Church during the 1530s. In his role as Bishop of London during the reign of Queen Mary, he was responsible for the death of many Protestants burned at the stake. He was known as 'Bloody Bonner' for good reason.

More than 400 years later, war veteran 'One-armed Jack' was the last resident of the Cottage, and is something of a local legend, remembered by some of the town's older community.

In 1963, Dereham Town Council became responsible for the upkeep of the Grade II listed building, and the Dereham Heritage Trust established the town Museum in the cottage.

For over 50 years it has been run entirely by volunteers. It is an Arts Council Accredited museum. Find out more on our website at www.derehamhistory.com.

Dereham Heritage Trust

From academic beginnings in 1953, the Dereham Heritage Trust is a friendly group of people who have a shared interest in the history of Dereham and the surrounding areas.

The archive and collection of the Trust are an important resource for the study of local history.

Material has been collected from the Dereham area since 1953 when the Trust was founded.

Displays of items from the collection can be seen in Bishop Bonner's Cottage Museum. Entry is free for Trust members.

The Trust also incorporates the Cowper Society of Dereham. There is traditionally a Cowper evening, around the anniversary of the poet's death on 25th April 1800.

The Arcadian Club is another specialist group within the Trust. It studies the life and works of the local antiquarian Dr Augustus Jessopp. He was the rector of Scarning for 30 years until 1902.

Volunteering in the Museum

Can we tempt you to experience 'hands-on' running of a museum?

We are always looking for people to join our group of volunteers who staff the museum on a rota basis. You would decide what time you could give to us - it could be as little as one session a month if that's all the time you have to spare. You will be trained on site and you do not need to be a member of the Dereham Heritage Trust. All we ask is that you are over 16; there is no upper age limit.

Volunteering in the Dereham Archive

Would you like to become a member of our volunteer team working with historic artefacts and documents?

Our archive has recently been moved to a more convenient location in the town, and we are working hard to get it ready to open to researchers and the public who wish to use it. For the time being, this complex task can be undertaken only by those already involved, but once that is done, we may well be seeking volunteers to work to improve its accessibility.

If you are interested in helping us in the future, please email ken-hawkins@tiscali.co.uk or phone Ken Hawkins on 01362 691455.
